Nerd Meets Bird

How birds teach us about our changing world

You don’t need to be a die-hard birder to appreciate our feathered friends! From the wrens singing by your window in the morning, to the chicken on your sandwich at lunch, to your friend’s pet parakeet, to the Canada geese flying overhead each spring and fall... the presence of birds and their seasonal rhythms are intimately enmeshed with everyday lives. If we watch and listen closely, what can we learn from them?

This event features stories and research from graduate student Katie Talbott, a viewing of the film A Big Year, a pop up library, and pizza for attendees.

Monday, Oct. 22

5-8 pm

Sciences Library—Chemistry 002